

Consultancy approach

mira – my consultancy approach

m more - in terms of “more than necessary”, extensive and integral.

It is not enough to analyze a problem isolated. We have to take into consideration the fact that the solutions we found could have effects on the company and its environment.

i interactive - to approach and work on solutions together.

Only by exchanging ideas and thoughts and testing your developed solutions in the corporation, can common ways be found, which will lead you to your goal.

r respectfully - to be respectfully since other people observe, identify and recognize.

Every situation and every business are conditioned by skills, experience, approach and attitude from the people involved in it. These factors must be observed, identified and recognized in any consultancy process.

a activity - an activity which is intended to have an impact on the environment and to alter this, as a cause an effect to attain.

Changes are supposed to be initiated through consultancy, changes that allow a good start and will show us new ways as well as end crisis and sometimes prepare us for an ending. This activities will be executed in an interactive and respectfully way and with the goal of prosperity in the future of the company.

In august 2002 I decided to start the ‘mira’ project with the intention to issue the compatibility of a higher benefit and social accountable business.

Attributes of the consultancy work

*enduring – the necessities of the actual generation corresponding to their own necessities and satisfying them without putting in danger the possibilities of coming generations (see Wikipedia, Brundtland Bericht, 1987)

